Tracy Burton : Never too old to backpack: A 364-mile walk through Wales before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Never too old to backpack: A 364-mile walk through Wales:

An avowed hater of camping, rain and mud, the author sets out to walk from one end of Wales to another with her partner, outdoor writer Harri Garrod Roberts. With a birthday looming, her rucksack stuffed to capacity and the memory of a disastrous six-day, five-blister backpacking trip in Somerset still fresh in her mind, will she be up to the challenge ahead? But walk it she must. For O Ffi i Fynwy is a long-distance end to end walk devised by Harri to showcase the most stunning landscapes Wales has to offer. This book is a personal account of the 364-mile journey as the couple hike the undulating and frequently mountainous route from Holyhead to Chepstow. From a sleepless night on a Bronze Age settlement to meltdown in Llandoverly, a hunt for a long-lost friend in Beddgelert to karaoke in Brecon, join the author as she encounters the very best (and worst) that Wales and long-distance hiking has to throw at her.
